Welcome to the Sullivan Family Library’s online tutorial on the A-to-Z Journal Title list.
Slide 1
The A-to-Z Journal Title list features all of the library’s journal titles available in print, microform and online. The list is easily searched or browsed for specific titles.

Slide 2
To access the A-to-Z journal list, start at the library’s homepage. Select the Search for menu and click on Journals by Title.
Here is the alphabetical listing of the library’s journals. You can browse the titles by clicking on the letters, or you can enter a journal title in the search cell. We’ll look for National Geographic and click Search.

Slide 4
The results page lists access points below each journal title. To find an article online, we can select one of the online databases. Academic Search Premier’s coverage starts in 1995 with a 3-month embargo, or delay, on recent issues. We’ll click Academic Search Premier for a 2007 article.

Slide 5
The link takes us to the database record for National Geographic. Along with general publication information, the record also indicates if a journal is peer reviewed. We can select an issue by clicking the year to expand its issues and then click the desired issue. We’ll look at April 2007.
All of the April 2007 articles are listed here. Some content, like letters to the editor, are only indexed and not available in full text. When the library has the journal in print, it is noted in the results.

Slide 7
Scrolling down the results, let's look at Hip-hop Planet. We'll click on the title to view the record page.

Slide 8
You can find citation information, applied subject terms, and an abstract in the article record. To view the article, click HTML Full Text.

Slide 9
You can now read the full text article. You can also print, email, and save the article by clicking the appropriate icon.

Slide 10
National Geographic has a 3-month embargo on online content. If we want an article from last month's issue, we need to find the paper copy. Back at the results page, we see the library has a paper copy from 1962 to present. Let's click on Paper to find out more.

Slide 11
The link takes us to the online catalog record. Here you can find the latest issues in the library collection, and where National Geographic is located. The Serials collection is arranged alphabetically by journal title.

Slide 12
You can also browse journals by subject. Click the Subjects tab and select a relevant subject from the drop-down menu.
If you are off-campus and click an online database, you will see this login screen. Just enter your 7-digit Chaminade ID number and password to login.
